

NORTHEAST BEHAVIORAL HEALTH PARTNERSHIP PEER SPECIALIST CODE OF ETHICS AND PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS

Mission Statement: The NBHP Code of Ethics, associated Values, and Professional Standards will guide trained Peer Specialists throughout the NBHP service area in their various roles, relationships, and levels of responsibility in which they function professionally.

Code of Ethics: A code of ethics is a set of guidelines which are designed to set out acceptable behaviors for members of a particular group, association, or profession.

A code of ethics can:

1. Set a professional standard;
2. Increase confidence in a profession by showing others that members of the profession are committed to following basic ethical guidelines in the course of doing their work;
3. Define acceptable behaviors;
4. Identify core values which underlie the work performed;
5. Set a higher level/standard of practice that sets a company apart from those which may not use a code of ethics;
6. Create accountability among employees through self-evaluation;
7. Establish occupational identity and maturity; and
8. Legitimize the profession of Peer Specialists.

Ethical Responsibilities: Ethical behaviors can affect a variety of individuals and organizations. It is important to practice ethical standards to prevent negative impacts and increase successful outcomes. Stakeholders who can be affected positively by high ethical standards include:

- Consumer: the individual receiving services from a Peer Specialist to promote their recovery and successful journey to resiliency;
- Self: the Peer Specialist engaged in providing services;
- Colleagues: agency co-workers and team members and staff from other organizations;
- Agency: the organization that the Peer Specialist represents in their work and delivery of services;
- Community: other organizations, the general public and larger community in which the Peer Specialist works.
